Market Commentary

- Summary: April was a monumental month for global markets, including European securitised assets, although it was a tale of two halves. Initially, the volatility that US President Donald Trump's 2 April tariff announcement led primary markets to close. At the same time, secondary activity spiked significantly as investors looked to raise cash and rotate into broader credit markets. However, following Easter, encouraged by an ease in President Trump's tariff rhetoric, new issue markets emerged and spreads began to retrace. Despite the dip in volumes, asset-backed security (ABS) markets saw €5.7bn of issuance while €3.0bn of collateralised loan obligations (CLOs) were issued. Activity is expected to pick up in May. Secondary markets were extremely active, in both bid-wanted-in-competition (BWIC) and bilateral activity. BWIC volumes reached €2bn for ABS and €2.3bn for European CLOs. In the US, CLO BWICs increased to $7.5bn, following an already elevated month of trading in March. The auction volumes were concentrated in AAAs, especially driven by US investors. The portfolio managers (PMs) were surprised by the high degree of liquidity in AAA CLOs on both sides of the Atlantic, given the volumes that were traded. While spreads have retraced somewhat, most significantly in senior ABS, there has been a steepening in credit curves and basis required to move into higher beta collateral expected in this environment.
- ABS: During April, markets saw €5.7bn of issuance, which was focused on UK residential mortgage-backed security (RMBS) and European consumer transactions. These were pushed below monthly averages due to market volatility following the 2 April tariff announcement. Investors looked to secondary markets, where volumes were close to four times the monthly average for the year. Selling was focused on AAAs, as investors looked to minimise the cost of liquidity. During this spell, UK prime RMBS spreads widened by 10-15 basis points (bps) to 0.6% over SONIA, where bank treasuries stepped in, supporting spreads back to pre-tariff levels. This brief reversal to the tightest levels in 2025 has not been fully replicated in other parts of the market. However, the aforementioned demand technical in the ABS market has supported spread products, a theme that we expect to continue throughout this year. Evidence of this came in the form of Santander's German consumer transaction, which printed €700m of bonds at levels in line with the end of 2024. Tranches were 3-9 times covered at initial talk, and AAAs tightened to 0.73% over Euribor and BBBs to 1.75% over Euribor. Mezzanine discussions for primary mortgage transactions were 30-50bps wide of pre-tariff levels.
- CLO: Coming into the month with a theme of indigestion, the tariff-implied volatility led to a sharp sell-off in the global CLO market. During April, the European CLO market saw just €3.0bn of supply, €1.6bn of which was new issue. In the US, just $13bn was issued, including $11bn of refinancing. The wider move in credit contributed to a widening of 100-200bps in high yield CLO tranches in Europe and 20bps in the AAA tranche. Selling was concentrated in both AAAs and higher coupon mezzanine tranches, particularly from multi-credit managers looking to rotate to alternative products. Although collateral performance continues to display resilience, headwinds from tariff uncertainty will likely appear, particularly in segments such as automotive and manufacturing, especially in the US. European leveraged loans ended the month down by 0.8 points, a significant reduction from the intra-month low of -2.0 points. With liability spreads for new issues 1.4% for AAAs and 3.9% for BBBs, the opportunity for CLO primary issuance seems to have returned for now.

Portfolio Commentary

- April was an active month for the Fund, as the PMs participated in a dynamic secondary market. In the CLO market, as spreads moved wider, the team deployed funds from a reduction to AAA CLOs into BBB CLOs at spreads of 3.8% over Euribor. In the European ABS market, the focus has been on rotations from peripheral senior bonds, trading at 0.7% over Euribor, into bank-issued prime RMBS and automotive bonds from captive issuers to build the Fund's liquidity position. The team has continued to allocate to Australian ABS, where spreads look to have settled, for now, at a larger premium to pre-tariff levels. The Fund's positioning remains relatively liquid because of ongoing trade and geopolitical risk.

Market Outlook and Strategy

- Following a very eventful April, the PMs are more optimistic about the current opportunity set in the European ABS and global CLO markets. As spreads have settled at around levels seen in the fourth quarter of last year, which are significantly wider than the tight levels seen in February and March, they believe that the risk-reward profile looks more in balance.
- Primary issuance is likely to improve from current low levels as we have seen the pipeline of new deals materialise. Increased supply is likely to be driven by UK RMBS and European consumer/automotive ABS issuers, which we expect to be met with high demand, especially in mezzanine tranches. The team expects CLO issuance to lag due to the difficult arbitrage.
- While risk sentiment seemed to improve in late April, the PMs remain cautious about adding risk, as they expect volatility in all financial markets to remain elevated for a longer period of time. Therefore, they continue to favour flexibility and liquidity. With BBB and BB rated CLO spreads now 1-2% wider from the levels seen in March, they believe this sector stands out in terms of relative value potential in particular.
